2. Cities

Port Angeles is the largest community on the North Olympic Peninsula; nestled right between the towering Olympic Mountains, and a large sized shipping harbor. You can literally be skiing in the mountains within an hour of leaving Port Angeles, or swimming in the bay within a few short minutes. When the Port Angeles Chamber of Commerce (<http://www.portangeles.org>) says that it's "The Center of It All" you know they're not fooling. There are plenty of activities, events and recreational opportunities that will keep you busy year round.

Sequim is located in the fertile Sequim - Dungeness Valley. Primarily a retirement community, Sequim has been going through a major growth spurt in the last few years. Renowned for its peculiarly good weather (considering it's within 70miles of a rainforest), Sequim has become a major center for lavender growing, and naturally grown products.

4. Quality of Life

The Olympic Peninsula has always been one of those places that visitors drive through and say, “I wish I lived here”. We’ve always encouraged that notion, and with the low cost of living, low crime rate, high quality healthcare and education, Clallam County is becoming a very popular place to move to.

The quality of life that can be found here has been noted not just by the many who call this place home, but by several noted publications, and organizations. Port Angeles has been awarded some notable awards, and was ranked 6th best place to live in the United States, and Sequim was recently noted in the Wall Street Journal as one of the best towns for retirement.
